And it is said also, that none could go to the upper part of the house, without being precipitated, by an unknown power from behind, headlong down a very long flight of stairs, and in this fall, those who escaped without broken necks, were sure to be attacked by an incurable and fatal disorder.

How much of this is true, I will not hazard my opinion to say, but it is remarkable indeed that one of the most distinguished preceptors of Hampton Academy should die in this same house—and he was a man too perhaps not unknown in these parts, for one of the best qualified, intelligent, literary men of the day. It was in this house that he too was suddenly and mysteriously carried off. He came down one evening for the purpose of bringing up some firewood into his study, which was on the second or third floor of the house, when, on returning, an unusual noise was heard in his apartment, and some of the students on going to his room found their beloved preceptor stretched dead on the floor. His name it may be recollect, was CHASE. His funeral was attended by all, his scholars, who for the first time since the Academy was established wore crepe on their wristbands. The physicians of the town, as in other cases, accounted for his untimely and sudden death in various natural ways, but the old people were more than ever confirmed in the belief that "Jimmy Squaretoe inhabited the house, as the land on which it was built, was General M——'s and therefore without the consent of the former, who was the proper heir, no one had a right to employ said land." The young preceptor's death is common in their mouths,

"And when they talk of him, they shake their heads, And whisper one another in the ear."

Mr. S. is now a poor man, having sold his house at auction, and at a great sacrifice from the original cost, which was hardly enough, "to square" his debts, which the temptation of "JIMMY" so unfortunately, but necessarily, made him incur. Gold nor silver which had been "rained down the chimney into the old General's boot," and which was the shining offspring of a certain contract, were sufficient to tempt the honesty of poor Mr. S., but success and fortune in another shape, which the adroit little man-in-leather found in the formation of a literary institution, over which he managed to be President, was unhappily calculated to ruin Mr. S., and fulfil the prediction of the witch Lyd, who told him seriously, "Mr. S——, I am sorry for you—but Jimmy Squaretoe and General M——, will not suffer with impunity any encroachment on their land, which stands assured for the legume, and the cutting off of the bottom of a certain boot!"

FRIDAY, AUGUST 18, 1843.

FOR PRESIDENT,

HENRY CLAY, OF KENTUCKY.

FOR GOVERNOR,

EDWARD ROBINSON, OF THOMASTON.

SEE FIRST PAGE.

Hon. Henry L. Ellsworth, U. S. Commissioner of Patents, is the owner of a large tract of land in Indiana, and advertises farms for sale, without the payment of cash. Emigrants from Europe will find this a good opportunity for procuring farms in a healthy and prosperous country, as Mr. Ellsworth says that timber will be furnished for fencing the land, and bituminous coal given for fuel for 10 years at least. One half the crops of the land for two or three years will be taken in full payment for the land, when a good title will be given. The land is ready for the plough, and the smoothness of the surface admits all the labor saving machinery in sowing and gathering—one man and a boy, with a team, break up two acres per day, and if corn is dropped in the furrow, a "soil crop" of 25 to 40 bushels is obtained without the least cultivation. The ordinary yield is 29 to 30 bushels of wheat, and 45 to 75 bushels of corn per acre. 2000 rails, with the help of a ditch, will make one mile of fence, and two teams will make a ditch the same distance (by new machinery) per day. If twigs of cotton wood and sycamore are inserted in the spring in the ditch every 10 feet, durable posts are obtained, besides a fine shade and much wood.

Mr. Ellsworth also advertises five thousand acres of timber land for sale for half the crops as above, or if preferred, the black salts made from the ashes saved in burning the timber-kettles too for boiling will be furnished on satisfactory terms.

This notice of Mr. Ellsworth presents a graphic picture of the extent and capabilities of our country and particularly of the great west. It shows how easily a man may, if blessed with health, and having a mind to work, with comparatively a small capital, make himself an independent tiller of his own soil. Indeed, in our own State, similar advantages may be found, and the young man, with temperate and industrious habits, may, in a short time, establish himself as an independent farmer, instead, as many do, of wearing out a life of anxiety and trial, subject to a thousand temptations and mortifying incidents, and without any regular employment, in our towns and cities. Fashion, fashion, alas! keeps thousands from becoming useful citizens, the pillars of the State, and ornaments of the age, by making them semi-idlers in the bosom of society. We ardently pray that a better public sentiment may yet prevail.

A correspondent of the N. Y. American, in allusion to John Quincy Adams, remarks that it is sad to think that a mind so gifted, so stored with knowledge, attained by unremitting study during a great portion of a century—an intellect so active, so lofty, and so courageous—should be so wise and courageous—must, in the order of nature, so soon cease to be; and adds: "I sincerely sympathize with the worthy captain of one of our steamboats, who said to me the other day, 'Oh, we will take the engine out of the old Ad— and put it into a new hull.'

The Madisonian says: "Let us all fight the Federal enemy." Upon which the Philadelphia Forum remarks that John Jones must be getting tired of his new connections. We don't interfere with your quarrels, Tylerism and Federalism are man and wife, united by Toryism, and we shall not attempt to separate them.

By a notice in another part of our paper it will be seen that Rev. Mr. BARRETT of New York minister of the New Jerusalem Church in that place will preach in this city on Sunday next.

Editorial Correspondence.

To our Cushioned Chair:

We have, in company with a witty friend, stepped on board the J. W. Richmond for a passage to Boston. The low fare, only twenty five cents, tempts many persons to make a trip, as a cheap and pleasant mode of spending a day, and we judge from the appearance of the company on board, that they have not been accustomed to travelling. Indeed, the impression is, that all the young lovers of the interior towns have taken in their lady loves for a pleasure excursion, and every nook and corner of this spacious boat is thronged. The opposition boat, the Splendid, now within a few feet of us, is literally loaded; and as the passengers move from side to side at the landings, she careens so much as to throw one of the wheels quite out of water.

The forward deck of both these boats is occupied, as is usual, with sheep, cattle, and horses, for the Boston market. We felt quite incensed to see so large a number of them crowded into so small a space—the sheep actually, in many cases, three deep, the upper tiers trampling the lower one to the deck—tearing the skin from their heads, gouging their eyes, and suffocating them until life seemed extinct, and in some cases, had quite departed. To preserve life at all, it was necessary for the keepers to change positions by frequently pulling up the sheep of the lower tier to a breathing place on top.

The scenery upon the Kennebec as the boat passed down its stream, through Meery-meeting bay and threaded its way among the numerous islands to Bath, was really delightful. Our friend Mors, of Bath, so well known to the people of this State as one of the most intelligent and faithful members of the legislature, was a passenger with us and pointed out the different objects of interest, with all which he was perfectly familiar.

On arriving at the wealthy and substantially prosperous town of Bath, where the boat stops for an hour, we had a favorable opportunity to take a glance at the town. A large and elegant meeting house is being erected here for the use of the church of which Rev. Mr. Fiske, of Bangor, is pastor. The large number of passengers, from the boats, that thronged the streets, gave a gay appearance, and it seemed as though the town had turned itself inside out and every body was abroad. The pride of Bath may be seen in its noble ships, several of which are in progress of construction, and several others, full rigged, are resting at the wharves. In these noble structures may be seen the skill of her mechanics and the capital of her wealthy men, and in their successful voyages is observed the intelligence and enterprise of her merchants.

The passage during the night was highly amusing. Most of the passengers were unused to the motions of a boat in the sea, and moreover there was a heavy rain, keeping all hands between decks. The horses began to squeal, the sheep to bleat and the cattle to low, interspersed with the less grateful sound of the vile oaths of officers and men. After much importunity we obtained a small straw pallet and spreading it upon a few seats sought for rest. The search was vain. "Hello, mister" cries a voice half way between a boy and a man "your boy is puking all on me, darn him!" This was followed by a roar of laughter and the appearance of about a hundred heads stretched out between the curtains like Egyptian architectural ornaments.

Time wore slowly away; the air was foul and heated, and after a variety of indications of uneasiness, soon after one o'clock, a person who probably had been in a disturbed sleep roused up and inquired what o'clock it was. "A quarter past five" replied a wag, in apparent sincerity. A movement was soon perceptible and about fifty persons turned out from their berths and commenced their toilet for the day in the expectation that the day had dawned upon them and that they must be about entering, with many of them, for the first time, the city of Boston. A visit to the deck, in the wet dark night, was sufficient to convince them of their mistake.

Their sudden return to the cabin and their consternation on finding their berths occupied, together with the ludicrous wranglings which arose, were vastly amusing, and served to cure our dyspepsia, the proud position of the first of American statesmen,

HENRY CLAY, OF KENTUCKY.

Resolved, That the course of our Legislature at its last session evinced the necessity of radical reform in the legislation, as well as the Administration of our State Government. Abandoning the purposes for which they were elected the majority of both branches, consumed the principal part of the session in debating questions in relation to the National Government, the affairs of other States, particularly those of Rhode Island, and the claims of individuals upon the National Treasury, while they rejected the money belonging to Maine, lying there without interest, and in forming various Congressional Districts, agreeable to their various private projects of interest and ambition. We cannot admit the validity of the defense which they set up, that many of these things were forced upon their attention by the weak and absurd recommendations of the Executive. This humiliating fact only shows that when the blind consent to be led by the blind it is not strange that both should fall into the very depths of political degradation.

Resolved, That the course of our late Representative in Congress, the Hon. E. H. Allen, meets our most cordial approval and that we cheerfully recommend him to the electors of this district as well qualified to fill that important station.

The Convention was addressed by the Hon. E. H. Allen, Wm. Paine, and A. Sanborn, Esqrs.

The following resolution was afterwards introduced by Gen. Isaac Hodson of Corinth.

Resolved, That it is the duty of the Senators, and Representatives of the people of the United States in Congress assembled, to exert their personal and official influence, by all legal and constitutional means, to diminish, circumscribe and finally abolish the practice and institutions of slavery; and more immediately and especially within the District of Columbia.

A motion was made to lay this resolution upon the table, which after some discussion, was lost, and the resolution was then adopted.

The convention after passing a vote of thanks to the proprietors of the meeting house, in which their meeting was held, then adjourned without day.

Fight in a Court House.

A few minutes after the Washington City Court adjourned on Friday, a fracas took place between James Hoban, Esq., one of Mr. Dowden's counsel, and Wm. Thompson, a Justice of the Peace. The cause was understood to be as follows: A letter appeared in a New York paper of Monday last, reflecting upon Mr. Hoban, for his speech in defense of his client. Mr. H.

supposed that Mr. Thompson was the author, and spoke to Mr. T. about it. Criticism brought reverberation, until finally they came to blows.

How it was settled, the Capitol, which gives the statement, does not say.

are informed, lost their books, papers, tools, &c.,

and a loss of which will be severely felt.

There is no doubt that this fire was a work of an incendiary. A person on board the ship An-

SMITH & FENNO.

FARM FOR SALE.

THE subscriber offers for sale, that a tract of land known as the Todd farm in the town of Chester. It is pleasantly situated on the river about four miles above Lincoln village, and consists of about 63 acres mostly excellent tillage land, including eight or ten acres of intervals. There is a small house upon it somewhat out of repair and a moderate barn.

To an experienced and practical Farmer, who would improve it himself, this

Farm would be highly valuable, as it will yield with suitable cultivation a large crop of Hay and Grain, which in that situation must always command a market at good prices. It will be sold on reasonable terms on application to me at Bangor.

GEO. B. MOODY,

Attorney for CHARLES H. TODD.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.

THE Subscribers offers for sale the FARM recently occupied by Nathaniel

Goodhue, at Linnans, nine miles this side of Houlton, on the Military Road.

Said farm consists of 300 acres of first rate land, 100 acres being in grass and tillage—a good house and two good barns, a good well of water, sheds and other outbuildings, all having been built within 6 years. The terms of sale will be liberal, or the farm can be exchanged for property in this city.
